FOREWORD

FOR a number of years workers in the field of local history in the United States and Canada have recognized that there was a growing popular interest in that subject, but here is tangible evidence of real growth. The last previous edition of Historical Societies in the United States and Canada: A Handbook, published in 1936, listed a total of 583 historical organizations in the two countries, while the present edition, as will be seen from the accompanying table, lists no less than 904, an increase of 56 per cent. While this increase may be due in part to a more complete coverage in the present edition, nevertheless it seems evident that the new figures represent a healthy growth. (No conclusions are drawn from the enormous increase from 15 to 564 in the supplementary list, since these figures, based upon incomplete data, are apt to be misleading.)

For the United States it will be seen that the increase is from 545 to 833, or 53 per cent. At the present time the leading states, and the number of historical organizations in each, are as follows: Pennsylvania, 77; Massachusetts, 71; New York, 59; Indiana, 45; Minnesota, 42; Illinois, 38; Ohio, 32; Missouri, 31; and Wisconsin, 31. In 1936 Massachusetts was in first place with 88 societies, New York was second with 55, and Pennsylvania was third with 44. Every one of the leading states today is in either New England, the Middle Atlantic area, or the Middle West, while not one of them is in the South or the vast area between Missouri and Minnesota on the east and the Pacific Ocean on the west. New England with 136 societies; the Middle Atlantic states of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania with 157; and the 5 states of the Old Northwest together with Minnesota, Iowa, and Missouri with 269, have altogether 562 of the nation's 833 societies. That is, 17 of the 48 states, with 19 per cent of the total area and 54 per cent of the total population of the continental United States, have no less than 62 per cent of the historical societies. This compares with these same states' 393 of the 545 societies in 1936, or 72 per cent of the total for the continental United States. Thus during the past eight years growth has been more rapid outside this area of concentration, which would seem to be a healthy sign.

In Canada the increase has been from 38 to 71, a growth of 87 per cent or nearly double the percentage of increase for the United States. Most of the Canadian societies are in the two provinces of Ontario and Quebec, which together have 39 societies, or 55 per cent of the Canadian total. This, however, compares with these two provinces' 25 out of 38 in 1936, or 66 per cent of the total. Thus in Canada, as in the United States, the percentage of gain has been greater outside the area of concentration.

The present handbook, published by the American Association for State and Local History (since 1940 the successor to the former Conference of Historical Societies), is another in the series of publications listing historical organizations. The previous publications are as follows: Handbook of Learned Societies and Institutions. America, publication Number 39 of the Carnegie Institution of Washington (1908); Handbook of American Historical Societies, published by the Conference of Historical Societies (1926); and Historical Societies in the United States and Canada: A Handbook, also published by the Conference of Historical Societies (1936).

The present volume has been compiled, edited, and published in spite of difficulties incident primarily to the war. The work of compilation was begun in 1941 by Dr. Sylvester K. Stevens, secretary of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and handbook editor of the American Association for State and Local History, assisted by his secretary, Miss Dolores J. Malloy. Dr. Stevens made a good beginning, but after Pearl Harbor he found himself so busy with special historical activities connected with the war that he was forced to give up this project and to resign as handbook editor. In 1943 the work was taken over by the Association's editor with the very material aid of Miss Doris Godard, a teacher of history in the Hugh Morson High School of Raleigh, who for almost an entire year devoted her after-school hours and week ends to this purpose, thus making possible the completion of the task.

The procedure employed was as follows: a committee was set up consisting of one member in each of the forty-eight states of the Union, the district of Columbia, and Canada. A supply of questionnaire forms was then mailed to each committee member, who in turn sent a copy to each society in his area. These forms, when filled in, were returned to the handbook editor, either direct or through the local committee member. The editor next compiled the data from the forms, and the compiled information was then sent back to the respective committee members to be checked and returned. This last step involved some time, effort, and expense, but proved useful in eliminating errors and securing additional information.

A small number of the forms was filled in during 1941 and 1942, when Dr. Stevens was in charge, but the majority of them are dated between July, 1943, and April, 1944. Since the information has been checked by the committee members and others early in 1944, most of it is believed to be up-to-date.

As might have been expected, not all the societies replied to the request for information. There was a noticeable difference in the degree of cooperation obtained in various states, and naturally the states which gave most assistance are those for which there is the most complete coverage. Many of the forms which were returned contained a disappointingly small amount of information, so that it was not possible to include as much material as had been hoped regarding important archival and manuscript holdings, chief museum collections, and the like. Wherever possible, when the necessary information was not supplied by the society itself, it was obtained from other sources.

For a great many societies which did not fill in and return the forms, it was impracticable to obtain reliable, detailed information. The names of such organizations and other limited data, much of which could not be verified, are included in supplementary lists which are presented for whatever they may be worth.

In all cases in the regular lists, and in many cases in the supplementary lists, the name of one or more of the officers of each society is given, and in the regular lists the name of the officer to whom correspondence should be addressed is indicated by an asterisk.

Libraries and museums have not been included as such. The former may be found in The American Library Directory, compiled by Karl Brown (New York: R. R. Bowker Company, 1942); the latter, in the Handbook of American Museums, with an appended list of museums in Canada and Newfoundland (Washington: The American Association of Museums, 1932); and The Museum in America, by Laurence Vail Coleman (Washington: The American Association of Museums, 1939), vol. III. Neither have most genealogical and "patriotic" organizations been listed. In a few instances it has been difficult to determine just what is a historical society and what is not, and in such cases it has been considered better to include too much than too little, with the result that a number of borderline organizations are listed.

Grateful acknowledgement is made of the valuable aid rendered by the members of the handbook committee, as follows:

Gratitude is expressed for financial assistance in meeting the cost of preparing and publishing the present edition of the Handbook, as follows: a grant from the American Council of Learned Societies; contributions from the New-York Historical Society, the late Alexander J. Wall of that Society, and the North Carolina State Department of Archives and History; and loans from the Indiana Historical Society, the New-York Historical Society, and the Pennsylvania Historical Society.
